The features of CBCS which include flexibility in the choice of courses and credits, continuous evaluation process, uniform grading system, and courses classification into core, electives, ability enhancement compulsory courses and skill development courses are in-built in the process. The salient features of NEP including multidisciplinary and holistic education approach, ethics and human values, extensive use of technology in education delivery, outstanding research, outcome based assessments, community services, etc. have also been incorporated in academic system. The CBCS provides for flexibility in designing curriculum with Mark to Market approach and assign credits based on course content and hours of teaching. It accelerates the teaching-learning process and enables vertical and horizontal mobility in learning. To enhance quality standards the system lays special emphasis on research, innovations, skill development, technology and human values in learning process. This academic system applies to all UG and PG programs offered by the University.

Programs

The University offers UG and PG programs in various disciplines.

Type of Courses

Courses in a program of study are classified into four categories i.e. Core, Electives, Ability Enhancement Compulsory Courses (AECC) and Skill Enhancement Courses (SEC).

1. Core Courses

These are the courses which are to be compulsorily studied by a student as a core requirement to complete the degree in a program of study. They are compulsory courses generally given in the beginning semester(s) to build up basic knowledge in any academic program. The weightage for this category is suggested to be 15-20 percent of the total degree credit requirements.

2. Elective Courses

Elective course is a course which can be chosen from a pool of subjects. It may be

- a. Supportive to the discipline of study
- b. Providing an expanded scope
- c. Enabling an exposure to some other discipline/domain
- d. Nurturing students proficiency/skills

They are the depth courses designed to achieve any/all of the above objectives in any degree Program. They help build expertise and skills in the degree domain area.

Further, elective courses may be divided into two categories i.e. Generic Centric/Open Elective and Discipline Centric/Specific Elective. 'Generic Elective' refers to those courses which add generic proficiency to the students and may be chosen from unrelated discipline. 'Discipline Centric' adds to subject expertise and are offered under the main discipline/subject of study.

The weightage for electives in degree Program is suggested to be 60 percent.

3. Ability Enhancement Compulsory Courses

AECC are based upon the content that leads to knowledge enhancement. For example, English Communication, Environment Studies, Disaster Management, Computer Application, Community Service, etc.

4. Skill Enhancement Courses

SEC courses provide value based and/or skill based knowledge and may have content both Theory and Lab/Training/Field Work. The main purpose of these courses is to provide students life skills and hands on skills so as to improve their employability.

The weightage for category 3 & 4 above is suggested to be 20-25 percent of the total credits.

However, keeping in view the nature and specific requirements of any degree Program there may be some variations in the relative weightage with in the categories as suggested above.

5. Value-Added Courses (VAC)

Courses under Value Added, Summer Internship/ Apprenticeship/ Community outreach activities, etc.,

The University realises that industry and academia collaboration is the way forward to achieve excellence in higher education. This helps the faculty to familiarize themselves with industrial practices and share the same with the students in the form of case studies to make teaching-learning interesting. To have linkage with the industry, the University is done various MoUs and through these provided opportunities to both the teachers and students to work with industry for various projects/ internships/ trainings. Researchers were encouraged to work on practical problems faced by the industry that will be fruitful for both research and industry.

Co-Curricular Activities - Overall Learning

In order to ensure that the students have effective learning experience, the University organized debates, essay writing, elocution and other competitions in both offline and online mode according to academic calendar to improve and sustain the academic quality of the students. The faculty ensured that the students have effective learning experiences through their problem solving skills. The University believes that the students who are given the freedom to explore areas based on their personal interests, and who are accompanied in their learning by a supportive, understanding facilitator, not only achieve superior academic results but also develop socially and grow personally. A well-maintained, separate computer laboratory with internet facility is accessible to the students. They can access latest changes and developments taking place in their respective domains, in higher education across the globe.

Extension Activities

Various extension activities were organized in the neighborhood community for creating and impact and sensitizing students on social issues and holistic development. The Department of Law and Women Development Cell organized Legal Aid Awareness Camp, Legal Literacy Camp in the adopted villages. Legal aid camp and awareness on legal rights for women organized to make community and students of the University aware about issues related to gender parity. Department of Pharmacy organized a Blood Donation Drive and Department of Physiotherapy organized health checkup camp for medical fitness in nearby community. University organized Yoga camps through the department of Naturopathy. Various extension activities like AIDS awareness, Environmental Awareness, water quality monitoring were organized. Community capacity building and livelihood programmes were also organized. In an effort towards development of social sensitivities and good citizenship qualities among the students, most of the departments integrate community outreach programmes into their curricular activities. Through extension and outreach activities students develop skills and aptitude for critical thinking, problem solving and acquires leadership, communication, and analytical skills. Students gain an understanding of social justice, value, responsibility, and sustainability.

The lecture aimed to shed light on the dynamic nature of Indian jurisprudence and its role in shaping societal norms, values, and legal reforms.

The event commenced with a warm welcome to all attendees by Ms. Alaknanda Rajawat, Assistant Professor, Faculty of Law. Prof. S.P.S. Shekhawat , Head & Dean Faculty of Law Welcomed Prof.O.P. Dhakad by presenting Green welcome, Prof. O.P. Dhakadan esteemed Guest and Professor, introduced the topic and outlined the objectives of the lecture.

Key Points Discussed: Professor Dhakad began by providing a comprehensive definition of social engineering within the context of the lecture. Social engineering was described as the conscious and deliberate efforts to bring about changes in societal norms, values, and structures, often through legislative reforms and policy interventions.

The lecture emphasized the pivotal role of social engineering in the evolution of Indian society. Various historical and contemporary examples were cited to illustrate how deliberate efforts to bring about change have shaped the nation's social fabric.

Professor Dhakad presented several landmark cases and legal reforms to illustrate the profound impact of social engineering on Indian jurisprudence. These included:

The Shah Bano Case (1985) - Highlighting the tension between personal religious laws and gender equality, which led to legislative changes.

The Nirbhaya Case (2012) - Demonstrating the power of public outcry and legal reforms in addressing heinous crimes against women.

The Sabarimala Temple Entry Case (2018) - Discussing the conflict between tradition and constitutional values, resulting in a landmark Supreme Court judgment.

Professor Dhakad emphasized that jurisprudence is not static but continuously adapts to meet the evolving needs, values, and ethical considerations of society. He elaborated on how legal frameworks have evolved to reflect changing societal norms.

The lecture acknowledged the challenges inherent in the process of social engineering and the evolution of jurisprudence. Balancing tradition and progress, accommodating cultural diversity, and safeguarding individual rights were highlighted as ongoing challenges. Professor Dhakad stressed the importance of informed discussions, open dialogue, and inclusivity in addressing these challenges.

Following the lecture, there was an engaging Q&A session during which attendees had the opportunity to ask questions, seek clarifications, and share their perspectives on the topic. This session encouraged active participation and enriched the discourse.

Professor O.P. Dhakad's guest lecture provided profound insights into the complex and evolving relationship between social engineering and jurisprudence in the Indian context. It underscored the dynamic nature of Indian jurisprudence and its role in shaping a just and equitable society.

The event organizers expressed gratitude to Professor O.P. Dhakad for his enlightening lecture and to all participants for their active engagement and thoughtful questions. The success of the event was attributed to the collaboration and enthusiasm of everyone involved.

It is recommended to maintain comprehensive records of this lecture, including video or audio recordings, for future reference. Furthermore, organizing similar events and discussions on the evolving legal landscape in India is advised to continue fostering a deeper understanding of social engineering and jurisprudence.

ACTIVITY REPORT

SCC Online Guest Lecture at Jagannath University

Date: October 13, 2023

Speaker: Mr. Ajay Pratap Singh

Platform: SCC Online

Purpose: Educational Insights on SCC Online for Legal Research and Judgments

On October 13, 2023, Jagannath University hosted a guest lecture on the SCC Online platform by Mr. Ajay Pratap Singh, the Academic Manager, India & Mr. Sachidanand Pareek, Manager Team lead, Rajasthan, of SCC Online. The lecture aimed to provide valuable insights into the SCC Online platform, its features, and how it can be a beneficial resource for legal research and accessing judgments.

Access to judgments is a crucial aspect of legal research, and SCC Online provides a valuable resource in this regard. Here's how SCC Online offers access to judgments. SCC Online houses a vast collection of judgments from various courts, including the Supreme Court of India, High Courts, and other judicial bodies. This extensive repository covers a wide spectrum of legal topics and cases, making it an invaluable resource for legal practitioners, scholars, and students. The platform offers a robust search function that enables users to search for specific judgments based on keywords, case names, citation references, or other criteria. This search functionality streamlines the process of finding relevant cases and materials for research. Users can filter and sort search results to refine the list of judgments. Filters may include jurisdiction, date, court, and other relevant criteria, making it easier to pinpoint specific cases of interest. SCC Online archives historical legal data, ensuring that users can access past judgments. This is particularly valuable for legal scholars and historians who wish to study the evolution of legal principles and landmark cases over time. The platform provides citation tools that simplify the process of citing cases accurately. This is essential for legal professionals, students, and researchers when incorporating legal authorities into their work. In addition to judgments, SCC Online often provides legal commentaries and annotations that offer in-depth analysis and explanations of legal principles, helping users understand the context and implications of specific cases. Users receive timely updates on new judgments, ensuring that they stay informed about the latest legal developments and precedents. This feature is vital for legal practitioners who need to remain up to date in their practice. SCC Online may offer features that allow users to collaborate on research projects and share relevant judgments and materials with colleagues and peers. This promotes collaborative research efforts. In the context of academic institutions like Jagannath University, SCC Online subscriptions often provide students and faculty with access to a wealth of judgments. This aids in academic research, case studies, and the development of legal arguments. In summary, SCC Online's access to judgments is a key feature that supports legal research and analysis. It offers an extensive collection of judgments, along with search and citation tools, that make it a valuable resource for legal professionals and scholars to stay updated on legal precedents and case law. For academic institutions, it facilitates comprehensive legal research and the development of students' understanding of legal principles through access to a rich repository of judgments. After this valuable session, students got insights of the SCC online platform and as a token of gratitude and thanks, a memento was presented to Mr. Ajay Pratap Singh by Ms. Alaknanda Rajawat, Assistant Professor, Faculty of Law, Jagannath University, Jaipur.

Lecture on 19 October 2023. Students of Law Department took part in the explicative event.

Objective

- To try and develop creativity, critical thinking and imagination in the students.
- To let student, enjoy and engage with their mates in college.

The Event

The Faculty of Law Organised a Extension Lecture related to Forensic Science. Dr. Girish Kumar Mathur, Worked as forensic scientists for about 35 years in State forensic Science Laboratory of Rajasthan who gave knowledge about Forensic science and its relation with law to our students. In his lecture he discussed that Forensic science is a discipline that functions within the parameters of the legal system and may have a remarkable contribution in supporting justice in crime investigation and other serious violations. Its purpose is to provide guidance to those conducting criminal investigations through the recognition and retrieval of evidence at crime scenes and accurate information on which they can rely on the resolution of criminal and civil disputes. Crime includes murder, rape, accident-related incidents, undisclosed persons, displaced persons, fraud-related cases, and forgery. Forensic Science is described as “applying science to statutes enacted in criminal justice by law enforcement agencies.” Forensic Science is concerned with the application of scientific concepts and methods of the various science disciplines to legal matters. The proof analysis consists of multiple areas such as sociology, physics, forensic chemistry and biology, DNA profiling, computer science, and engineering. Physics, for example, is used to understand the blueprint of a blood dispersion; biochemistry seeks to strengthen the basis for an unverified suspect, and chemistry helps us to find out the chemical composition of different drugs.

Forensic science is an integration of nearly all scientific skills and acts as a critical and qualified tool that makes the dispensation of justice possible in criminal, civil, legislative, and social contexts. It helps to describe all of science’s applications in addressing the questions of legal significance. Forensic science is now a highly advanced research method used in criminal and civil investigations, able to address critical questions and an integral part of the criminal justice system. It includes all renowned techniques such as the analysis of fingerprints, DNA analysis, ballistics and explosives, firearms, culture, etc.

The legal system clearly understands the role that forensic evidence plays in criminal trials. This is because there isn't much room for bias or discrimination while using scientific techniques and methods. This is why profiling of DNA and a variety of other forensic evidence are commonly recognized in courts around the world. Interestingly, the Chinese (650 A.D.) dates back to the first forensic technique ever used that involved finger and palm print recognition.

Forensic testimony is commonly used across the world for both convicting and exonerating suspects. Thus, forensic science labs have been mushrooming across the globe over the past few decades. In addition, Special Acts have been passed to enhance the delivery of forensic services in the US, Canada and Australia. This ensures greater certainty in the detection of crimes, and consequently, rates of conviction may increase. Such Acts place great emphasis on timely and high-quality crime scene management.

The forensic proof is often used for both defendants who have been convicted and acquitted. As a consequence, the number of crime laboratories throughout the world has increased significantly over the last couple of decades. Special acts have been implemented in the United States, Canada, Great Britain and Australia in order to improve the forensic status of criminals and thereby enable convictions to increase. They stress the timely and quality management of the crime scene. In 1878, India set up the first official crime lab. Around 35 forensic labs now in the country are limited to unique facts. The growing rank and file in the field of forensic sciences and the fundamental role forensic evidence plays in numerous criminal cases has driven up the increase in the numbers of criminals laboratories. A constantly evolving world raises the burden on law enforcement agencies to collect better facts. The news media highlight the importance of forensic science but also focus on errors in locating and identifying in high profile cases.

Expert testimonials offer an important informational source in international criminal proceedings, and forensic expertise is no exception: the ad hoc trials and judgments have been based on findings from exhumations and examinations. While issues relating to the relationship between law and science have been explored within the domains of national judicial systems, the mixed court system presents a solid debate with new contexts. An officer with further forensic studies could be overconfident and unintentionally taint evidence, making it inadmissible. Instead, given the current lack of adequate collection of substantial evidence from the crime scene (if not trampled underfoot and completely ignored), proper training will be more likely to improve the situation rather than worsen it, if competent forensic science instructors are able to carry out it. In the Indian case, greater focus was put on the use of these technologies in criminal investigations and trials. Commissions appointed on criminal justice reforms have affirmed that the introduction of crime detection technologies will enable the system to work efficiently. The related laws have been changed from time to time to make room for the use of forensic technologies in investigating and prosecuting crime. And yet, it can be argued that the regulations that need to be revised have current flaws. Also, due to their conservative approach, the courts are reluctant to rely on empirical evidence, or other inherent flaws in the evidence presented in court, which prevent them from relying entirely on it. Criminal justice system's primary motto is to have equal justice. The forensic proof is, no doubt, more credible than eye testimony.

Being a scientific method, forensic science is a boon to the criminal justice system. To progress, we need to overcome the existing flaws. Around the same time, there is a need to ensure that law enforcement and investigative agencies once again understand and use forensic science as a holistic problem-solving resource to their full potential. It is apparent that such a technique is incorporated within a context that enables an understanding of the input that a particular form of evidence may provide meaningfully in terms of sub-source, source, operation or offence-level proposals for a given collection of case-specific circumstances rather than restricting it to a one-dimensional reactive procedure. An interpreted means of evaluative monitoring of forensic science data pertinent to a specific case but retained in the context of that case where alternate solution propositions can be attended to and challenged correctly, works to fulfil this problem-solving prospects. Such a method has been developed by the Association of Forensic Science Suppliers among others.

Learning Outcomes

This activity helped the students to get knowledge about scope and avenues of legal field and gain knowledge about Forensic science.
